KAMRAN MIRSHAHI (6TH TRI)

Kamran Mirshahi is a 6th trimester D.C. student who is also pursuing his masters in Human Anatomy and Physiology. He grew up in Kettleby, a small town in Canada, alongside his eight siblings. In 2015, he completed his Bachelor's degree in physical and health education at Nipissing University in North Bay, Ontario. While in undergrad, Kam worked as an athletic therapist and had the opportunity to shadow several successful chiropractors. After witnessing some of the great things chiropractic did for patients, Kam was inspired to pursue a career in chiropractic. Dr. Diane Travis and Dr. Stephen Porter greatly influenced Kam's decision to be a chiropractor. Dr. Larry Bell, an NYCC alumnus, recommended applying here.

Kam knew right from the start that he had made the right choice in coming to NYCC. He started out living on campus, where he developed a strong support system. One of the things Kam likes best about NYCC is the sense of community between students and faculty. Two of his favorite professors are Dr. Maria Thomadaki and Dr. Veronica Mittak, and he really enjoyed his neuroscience and anatomy courses. In his spare time, Kam likes spending time outdoors and traveling. He recently traveled to Nevada to attend a chiropractic seminar and explore the area.

Upon graduation, Kam plans to move to the West Coast and open a multidisciplinary wellness practice. He also would like to teach anatomy and physiology at a local university. Kam's advice for incoming students is to not study too much. Take breaks to explore the Finger Lakes and do the things that you're interested in.
