

The NYCC Clinical Education Experience

The Clinical Hub-and-Spoke Model

The outpatient health centers affiliated with New York Chiropractic College are structured in a “Hub and Spoke” model in order to maximize student learning opportunities. Students report to their assigned “hub” and perform patient care services as directed by the clinical staff. Each hub has relationships with regionally affiliated external sites—or “spokes”—to which chiropractic students are assigned on a rotational basis for additional clinical experiences. This model offers students opportunities to experience different clinical settings that promote a variety of patient care. Clinical environments include:

- Complimentary Care Sites: Free/community-care sites treating underserved populations
- Veterans Administration Medical Centers: Integrated medical care settings providing treatment for patients with complex conditions
- Higher Education Student Health Centers: Treatment for college student and staff populations
- Community Hospitals and Health Care Centers: Treatment in a multidisciplinary care environment
