

I AM NYCC

IAN HUANG (6TH TRI)

Ian Huang is currently a 6th trimester chiropractic student and 3rd trimester acupuncture student. Originally from Burke, Virginia, he attended James Madison University, where he completed his Bachelor of Science in Biology in 2015. At first, Ian wanted to go into acupuncture and follow in his father's footsteps. However, he didn't want to restrict himself to acupuncture alone and started to look for complementary therapies. After some research, he discovered that acupuncture and chiropractic together make a great team and decided on that for his holistic approach to healthcare. When considering chiropractic schools, he looked at ratings and reviews, and he also wanted to stay close to home.

One of the things Ian really loves about NYCC is that the professors are always there to help you if you need it and are very friendly. One of his favorite classes so far has been Bone and Joint Imaging. While it is extremely difficult, it's also very rewarding. Some of Ian's favorite professors are Drs. Chad Warshel, Vincent Loia, Maria Thomadaki, and Ilija Arar, who all strive to make their difficult classes as enjoyable as possible.

Ian will graduate from the Doctor of Chiropractic program in November 2018, and from the Master of Science in Acupuncture program in April 2019. Upon graduation, he hopes to work with his father, incorporating chiropractic, and eventually take over his practice. The education that Ian is receiving at NYCC will help him clinically, as it has given him a strong base of knowledge, and his experiences will build upon that foundation. Ian's other interests include qi gong, tennis, travel, and experiencing new types of cuisine. He would like to express his appreciation to the staff and faculty of NYCC for truly caring about each student's education and success, and for providing opportunities to further our experiences. His message to students is this: A few years of hardship is worth the lifelong happiness you will achieve by helping others.
