

I AM NYCC

MORGAN HUEY (3RD TRI)

Morgan Huey is a graduate of Indiana University of Pennsylvania, where she earned a Bachelor of Science in Natural Sciences with a concentration in pre-chiropractic studies and a minor in chemistry. During her time in undergrad, she shadowed several chiropractors in western Pennsylvania, who gave her a better understanding and inspired her to pursue a career in chiropractic.

Since starting her journey at New York Chiropractic College in May 2017, what Morgan has appreciated the most is the sense of community on campus. She loves how the upper-trimester students really come together to engage with and mentor the newer students, forming bonds that provide more experienced friends for the new students to rely on as mentors and encourage older students to lead by example. Morgan plans to specialize in whole-family wellness care, working with a variety of age groups to help her future patients live as pain-free as possible, no matter their activity level.

The best advice Morgan has received, and which she continually endeavors to follow, came from a student who was in 10th trimester at the time: “Be a sponge; take in and absorb as much information from your professors and older friends as you can. You can learn so much from just watching and listening.” Some of Morgan’s strongest influences have been her chiropractor from home and the one who treated her during undergrad. Their commitment and dedication to patient-centered care inspired her as she realized the impact chiropractors have on their patients. Another of Morgan’s most influential mentors was a former employment supervisor whose management style she admired. She had a way of making things happen while showing unwavering care for the company’s employees – always patient and never failing to go the extra mile for them. Morgan aspires to one day operate her clinic with the same type of compassion.

In addition to her studies, Morgan has been taking advantage of all that the Finger Lakes Region has to offer. Hiking at the state and national parks, cycling the beautiful country roads, and kayaking on Cayuga Lake are some of her favorite pastimes. She is also a wine lover, visiting many of the wineries in the area and meeting many of the local people!
